

TODAY: Results

- 1 What is it?
- 2 Group discussion
- 3 Exercises

What is results language?

Definition: Words we use to say the product of another thing

Example:

Mr Green has diabetes. Consequently, he is taking medication

- As result of
- Consequently
- Due to
- Resulting

GROUP QUESTIONS:

1. Why have I separated them into 2 types? (Green / Blue)
2. Are there any grammar mistakes in the sentences below?

1 st Cause / 2 nd result		Result 1 st / 2 nd Cause
Due to this + S + v A car crashed and due to this Mr Green was admitted ...		As a result of + noun Mr Green was admitted to ER as a result of an accident ...
As a result of which + S + v A car crashed as a result of which he was admitted ...		Due to + noun Mr. Green was admitted to ER due to an accident ...
Which resulted in + noun A car crashed which resulted in his admission to hospital ...
Resulting in + noun* A car crash resulting in an admission to hospital ...

1. Mr Smith had a severe allergic reaction to the medication, which resulted in administration epinephrine immediately.
2. The surgeon performed a successful operation, resulting in him recovering rapidly.
3. Smoking is a major risk factor for lung cancer, and due to this it is essential to quit smoking to reduce the risk.
4. Mrs Jones experienced severe dehydration, as a result of a lack of proper fluid intake during a marathon.
5. The new treatment had significant side effects, resulting in the decision to discontinue its use.
6. Obesity is a growing concern worldwide, as a result of an increased risk of diabetes and heart disease.
7. Lack of exercise and poor diet can lead to obesity, which resulted in various health problems.

Summarise:

When using results language:

1. Is the language followed by NOUN or Subject and Verb
2. Is the CAUSE first or the RESULT first